Whereas, the State Constitution guarantees the right to the privilege of education for all North Carolinians; and

Whereas, the State Constitution creates special obligations and authority for the legislative branch to ensure the State's affirmative duty to provide public education is executed; and

Whereas, the State Constitution charges the legislative branch with providing for a system of free public schools with equal opportunities for all students, including students who are deaf and blind; and

Whereas, the State Constitution requires the State Board of Education, subject to laws enacted by the General Assembly, to supervise and administer the free public school system; and

Whereas, the General Assembly provided for the establishment of the Governor Morehead School for the Blind, first opened in Raleigh in 1845, the North Carolina School for the Deaf, first opened in Morganton in 1894, and the Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf, first opened in 1964; and

Whereas, the General Assembly finds that a change in governance would allow more responsiveness to the needs of students accepted and enrolled in the educational programs offered by the schools for the deaf and blind; and

Whereas, the creation and appointment by the General Assembly of boards of trustees with similar powers and duties to local boards of education, under supervision of the State Board of Education, would be a more effective model to ensure opportunities for access to the privilege of education for those students; Now, therefore,
